SATURDAY, APRIL 9, 1870.

THE NEW CHAMPION OF THE VIRGINIA RADICALS.

HENRY A. WISE, the valiant and irrepressible ex-Governor of Virginia, has appeared before the public in a new character. As an ex-Secessionist he boasts that he is still an unrepentant Rebel, but as a lawyer he has entered the lists as counsel for Chahoon, the Mayor of Richmond, who acts under the authority of the Re-construction acts. Ex-Governor Wells, the late radical Governor of Virginia, is an associate counsel of Wise in this proceeding, and the party against whom it is directed is Ellison, or Ellyson, who seeks to exercise the powers of the Mayoralty of Richmond by virtue of an act passed by the conservative Legislature and signed by the conservative Governor of the State. As a lawyer, therefore, the great Virginia fire-eater is now arrayed on the side favored by the most ultra-Abolitionists, and his latest forensic effort was an earnest and vigorous defence of the injunction issued by Judge Underwood, which forbid Ellyson from attempting to act as Mayor of Richmond, under penalty of imprisonment. It remains to be seen whether Wise has become the advocate of Chahoon as a mere matter of business, or whether his action has a deeper significance. It is not improbable that he has taken his present position with the intention of making himself a leader of the radical party of Virginia. He is accustomed to bold and desperate political movements, and can change front with wonderful adroitness. He flattered the slaveholders in the day of their power, and derided the negroes, but since times have changed, and the freedmen have obtained the whip-hand of their old oppressors, Wise may yet outbid all Democratic, conservative, and radical competitors in his efforts to win the sweet voices of the newly enfranchised voters. Endowed with inordinate ambition, and gifted with no small share of genius, the ex-leader of the fire-eaters may yet become the most thoroughly reconstructed and regenerated Rebel of his State, and in due season he might even hope to run as a candidate for Vice-President on a ticket headed by a negro aspirant for the first station in the land.

THE FISHERY QUESTION.

THE Canadians, enraged at the refusal of the United States to renew the Reciprocity treaty, have revived the old dispute about the fisheries, and there is every probability that trouble will ensue if the authorities of the "New Dominion" attempt to exclude the fishermen of the United States from the fishing grounds on the plea that they have exclusive jurisdiction over all the waters between headland and headland. If there is any difficulty upon this subject, the only right policy for the United States to pursue will be to take a firm stand, and insist upon the matter being settled definitely at once and forever. We cannot afford to be annoyed upon such a subject as this by the Blue-noses any longer, and it will obviate further trouble if they are given to understand definitely that there will be no abatement on any pretext from what we consider our just rights.

Our Government on more than one occasion has allowed itself, for the sake of avoiding a threatened conflict, to be bullied into making improper concessions to the British with regard to boundary questions, the fisheries, and other matters that have been brought into controversy; and it is time now that they were given to understand that we are the masters of this continent, and that we propose in future to show that we have the ability as well as the disposition not only to resist any such insolent measures on the part of the Canadians as the attempt on their part to enforce their old claim with regard to the fisheries would be, but to retaliate in such a manner as will put us in absolute possession not only of the fisheries but of all the country adjoining them. The time is not very far off when the necessity for the United States to have the control of the outlet and entire course of the St. Lawrence river will be pressed upon the attention of the public; and if the Canadians propose to get up a conflict with regard to the fisheries, it would perhaps be expedient to settle a present and a prospective matter of controversy at the same time by taking possession of all the territory to the south of the St. Lawrence.

DISCRIMINATION.

The great problem of the Democratic managers at this time is to secure as large a proportion of the colored votes as possible without embracing the African as a man and a brother in such an open and undisguised manner as to disgust the rank and file of the unaffiliated. The problem is a knotty one, and if the Democracy of to-day succeed in solving it, they will show themselves to be better masters of strategy than any one would have reason to expect from their performances during the last decade. The Richmond Dispatch, since the ratification of the fifteenth amendment, has shown a commendable interest in the political welfare of the American citizens of African descent, and it strongly urges upon them the impolicy of all casting their ballots one way, and that way being against the Democracy. The Dispatch says:—

"Until colored people discriminate, it is clear they have no discrimination; and as long as they go like a flock of sheep (all one way), they will prove themselves unworthy to be voters. The formation of an African party—if we may call it so—would undoubtedly be a mistake, but there is no present danger that any such party will be formed or attempted. But the negroes since their emancipation have, as a general rule, shown themselves to be pretty good judges of the political situation, and the old pro-slavery party has done very little to secure either their votes or their good will. At the next election in Richmond the Dispatch will probably find that the colored people know how to discriminate without instruction. Against whom they will discriminate is so palpable that it is needless for us to specify. The events of the last ten years are too vivid in the recollection of the colored voters of the United States for the Democracy to have any great hopes of recruiting their ranks from them for some time to come at least.

THE DISCUSSION of the tariff bill proceeds steadily, but rather slowly, in Congress. The Chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means recently complained that, notwithstanding the time heretofore allowed for general debate, members would persist in blowing off steam in reference to the main issue of free trade or protection, instead of confining themselves to details. The free traders are especially active and persistent in advocating their various theories. Unabashed by repeated refutations of their arguments, they reiterate them on every possible occasion, and never grow weary of desperate attempts to palm off exploded fallacies as facts. Brooks, of New York, is especially talkative. He made himself even more ridiculous than usual on Thursday, when he complained of the taxation imposed on spool cotton. Mr. Dawes quietly replied that the seamanstresses of the country did not pay a penny more for a hundred spools made in the United States than for the same number imported from England; but Brooks will no doubt repeat his outcry against this tax of one-tenth of a mill on a spool, if another opportunity should be presented.

IT IS ALLEGED that Secretary Fish has adopted a policy of "masterly inactivity" in regard to the Alabama claims; and that he refuses to suggest any new mode of settlement or to press the subject upon the attention of the British Government, in the hope that in their anxiety to close up the controversy they will be tempted, some of these fine days, to hand over the New Dominion as a settlement in full. It remains to be seen how this plan will work, but at the first blush it appears to resemble too strongly the old Dutch mode of governing New York to prove very efficacious. There is danger that if we continue to wait in patience for the adjustment of the old claim, it will gradually pass into the long category of overdue bills which nobody ever thinks of liquidating; and as for the New Dominion, if Great Britain spends, as is now not improbable, a few millions to crush the Red River rebellion, she will clutch her American territory with a tighter grasp than ever. There is a time to wait and a time to act, and Secretary Fish should be very careful not to confound one with the other.
